MOOD:  brrr.

From  windrose (<https://windrose.livejournal.com/>), a news item that, curiously, reminds me of absent friends:

In Florida, it's raining frozen iguanas.
(<https://www.livejournal.com/away?to=http%3A/www.wesh.com/weather/14973518/detail.html>)

Apparently, no one is safe.

Thank you

...And there goes the weekend

But hey, we got a day and a half of this one! And I got to sleep in for two whole mornings. Too bad Weather is here. Wish you were beautiful.

Oh, wait, you are beautiful.

Well, the weather is still here, anyway. Supposed to thaw on Monday. Praise the lord and pass the ammunition. We're going to try search teams with snowshoes.

Awwwwwwwwwwww.

But really, isn't that kinda comforting? Because you could be in Florida right now. And you could walk under a tree. And an iguana in a coma would fall on your head.

All the down and Thinsulate in the world cannot save you from falling comatose iguanas.

But if there's a thaw, doesn't It sort of do the reverse of the iguanas and go into dormancy? Or something?

And a frozen iguana on your head could really hurt.

There's a Monty Python sketch in there somewhere.

Dormancy might be our best hope at this point. Because I am not going to say the thing.

You know.

About the thing we need to crack the case.

I don't ask for that kind of stuff.

Rather have an iguana.

Current circumstances frustrating, depressing, and frightening.

And yet, the phrase "frozen iguana" puts the smile right back on my face.

We should invent the drink.

If I am ever again warm enough to sweat, that will sound sooooo good.

"This is an ex-lizard!"

Yeah, we do not say the thing. I'll take frozen iguanas for twenty...

Okay, who's awake and on duty? Just checking in, but I don't want to ring anyone's phone, on account of the sleeping-in-shifts thing.

And I get the fretting.

At least they have some progress going out West.

Lucky, lucky them. We are entirely not them. (What they got in Youbetchaville?)

Re fretting: Hey, better you than me. g

She will be pleased to the tenth. Don't know what the dump site was like, but OMG she was angry.

Funny how we each have different prompts for that. Or, y'know, entirely to be expected.

she squealed and said she loved me. wish i could get that in a non-work-related version.

choppers, right? minnesota in winter, noplac to hide if he's out and about.

and screw it, lock the area down and starve the unsub out. we know where he is.

there's a time for brute force and ignorance and mongolian hordes technique. this might be it.

Did you see my post about the zombie attack at Hierakonpolis? There's a wonderful survival guide for field archaeologists at the end, complete with detailed instructions on how to decapitate a zombie using a trowel.

The number and the standard position of the cut marks (usually on the second-fourth cervical vertebrae; always from the front) indicate an effort far greater than that needed simply to cause the death of a normal (uninfected) person. The standard position also indicates these are not injuries sustained during normal warfare.

And photo aids for archaeologists on-site in case of disturbed zombies!
